This chapter begins with a discussion of the evolution of the international law of state immunity. It then reviews the modalities of granting immunity, attachment and seizure in execution, and state immunity and human rights.
22. Privileges and immunities of foreign states