To successfully complete specific assessments, the student will need to know what is expected of them, and develop the skills to deal with it. Depending on where they are studying law and the optional subjects they choose, they may come across many different forms of assessment, or only a very narrow range. This chapter looks at some of the different forms of assessment that they may come across, and gives tips on how they can approach them to enhance chances of success. These include exams, essays, problem questions, multiple choice tests; advocacy, oral presentations, and video submissions; and reflective reports. The chapter also considers group work for assessment.
12. Completing assignments: Assessment specific skills

Access to the complete content on Law Trove requires a subscription or purchase. Public users are able to search the site and view the abstracts and keywords for each book and chapter without a subscription.

Please subscribe or login to access full text content.

If you have purchased a print title that contains an access code, please see the information provided with the code or instructions printed within the title for information about how to register your code.

For questions on access or troubleshooting, please check our FAQs, and if you can't find the answer there, please contact us.