This chapter was created for those who have not yet made up their mind about whether to study law, or are reviewing or questioning their plans. Making the decision to undertake a law degree may not be easy. The student may be wondering what studying law at university will be like, or where a law degree might lead. Conversely, even if their ultimate aim is to become a lawyer, they may be unsure whether they must, or should, complete a law degree. The chapter addresses questions such as what is law; where will law lead; is law for them? It also discusses different degree programmes containing law; selecting a law programme; the Graduate Diploma in Law; and studying law in the UK as an international student.
2. Thinking about studying law

Access to the complete content on Law Trove requires a subscription or purchase. Public users are able to search the site and view the abstracts and keywords for each book and chapter without a subscription.

Please subscribe or login to access full text content.

If you have purchased a print title that contains an access code, please see the information provided with the code or instructions printed within the title for information about how to register your code.

For questions on access or troubleshooting, please check our FAQs, and if you can't find the answer there, please contact us.