This chapter examines the privacy action in tort. It explains that the tort has its origins in the equitable wrong of breach of confidence. It discusses the gist and elements of this tort and highlights the influence of Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights on the case law. This chapter also discusses potential defences, which include consent to the disclosure and the differential treatment of private information in the public domain.
22. Privacy actions in tort