17. The Essential Characteristics of Easements

Complete Land Law: Text, Cases, and Materials (6th edn)
Barbara Bogusz and Roger Sexton

Publisher: Oxford University Press
DOI: 10.1093/he/9780198824909.001.0001

Chapter: (p. 535) 17. The Essential Characteristics of Easements
Author(s): Barbara Bogusz and Roger Sexton
DOI: 10.1093/he/9780198824909.003.0017

Titles in the Complete series combine extracts from a wide range of primary materials with clear explanatory text to provide readers with a complete introductory resource. This chapter discusses the characteristics of an easement: there must be a dominant and a servient tenement; the easement must accommodate the dominant tenement; the easement must be owned or occupied by different people; and an easement must be capable of forming the subject matter of a grant. All four characteristics must exist for a right claimed to be an easement. If any one of those is missing, then the right is not an easement.

Access to the complete content on Law Trove requires a subscription or purchase. Public users are able to search the site and view the abstracts and keywords for each book and chapter without a subscription.
17. The Essential Characteristics of Easements

Please subscribe or login to access full text content.

If you have purchased a print title that contains an access code, please see the information provided with the code or instructions printed within the title for information about how to register your code.

For questions on access or troubleshooting, please check our FAQs, and if you can't find the answer there, please contact us.