9. Finding books, journals, and official publications

There are a range of important sources of law beyond legislation and case law. These are materials that provide information on the content, meaning, and operation of the law and help students in their quest to understand the law. This chapter explains how to find these important supplementary resources. It covers books, journals, official publications, Halsbury's Laws of England, Bills, and Hansard (Official Reports of Parliamentary Debates).
