This chapter concludes the discussion of European copyright and related rights law by considering the exceptions and limitations permitted (and potentially, required) by Article 5(2) to (4) of the Information Society Directive. A central theme is the increasing challenge being presented to domestic law- and decision-making by the EU law of fundamental rights, including the growing body of EU case law regarding the implications of the Charter of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms of the European Union for the scope and enforcement of copyright and related rights and the coherence and consistency of the emerging jurisprudence in this area.
13. Copyright and Related Rights Exceptions and Limitations abstracts and keywords for each book and chapter without a subscription.

Please subscribe or login to access full text content.

If you have purchased a print title that contains an access code, please see the information provided with the code or instructions printed within the title for information about how to register your code.

For questions on access or troubleshooting, please check our FAQs, and if you can't find the answer there, please contact us.