This chapter examines a number of related offences that are found in the Theft Acts 1968 and 1978. The chapter considers the rationale for the existence of these offences and examines why it was considered necessary to have offences that supplement the general offence of theft.