11. The Corporate Structure

This chapter explains the statutory requirements with respect to the formation of an LLP and explains the process by which an LLP is incorporated. It explains how, as an incorporated body, an LLP acts through its members and other agents, and how their acts and their potential wrongdoing can be attributed in law to the LLP itself. It addresses the concept of limited liability that is consequent to an LLP’s incorporation, and identifies the obligations that are imposed on an LLP arising from limited liability, in terms of registration and publicity.
