This chapter explains the separation of powers doctrine, first describing the three branches of government: the legislative, judicial, and executive. It then discusses why separation of powers is needed, different conceptions of separation of powers, and separation of powers in the UK.
4. Separation of Powers—An Introduction