15. Inchoate offences: attempt, conspiracy and assisting and encouraging under the Serious Crime Act 2007

This chapter examines different types of inchoate offences in Great Britain, which include attempt, conspiracy, and encouraging or assisting. It explains the conditions of liability for these offences, discusses the relevant provisions of the Serious Crime Act 2007, clarifies the general principles of these offences, and identifies their actus reus and mens rea elements. It also explores and clarifies the difference between these offences. The chapter discusses the three offences that replace the common law offence of incitement which apply to one who ‘facilitates’ another’s offence. Examples of relevant cases and analyses of court decisions in each of them are also provided.
15. Inchoate offences: attempt, conspiracy and assisting and encouraging under the Serious Crime Act 2007

Access to the complete content on Law Trove requires a subscription or purchase. Public users are able to search the site and view the abstracts and keywords for each book and chapter without a subscription.

Please subscribe or login to access full text content.

If you have purchased a print title that contains an access code, please see the information provided with the code or instructions printed within the title for information about how to register your code.

For questions on access or troubleshooting, please check our FAQs, and if you can't find the answer there, please contact us.